Denver Design's Power Couple

For Georgeson Style co-founders Kyndra and Larry Georgeson, interior design and home renovation are as connected as they are Kyndra and Larry Georgeson, co-founders of Georgeson Style, love their work so much that it keeps them up at night. "We live and breathe our business," says Kyndra Georgeson, lead designer of the boutique, design-build firm. Kyndra and Larry, a licensed general contractor who makes up the build portion of the team, are happily married and united in their passion for transforming homes. Their one-stop shop approach translates into extraordinary attention to detail for clients.

Since 2018, Georgeson Style has expanded from solely interior design and decor to full home renovations, primarily throughout Denver's Central Park, Hilltop, and Park Hill neighborhoods. Kyndred™, the Georgesons' online interior design shop, features thoughtfully sourced home goods that reflect a deep respect for global cultures.

Aside from a predilection for clean, eclectic, modern spaces, the delightful irony of the company name is that there is no definable "Georgeson" style. "We design around what our clients love and what they don't. At the end of the process, their home should look like them," says Kyndra.

A recent full renovation of a house in Central Park underscores the Georgesons' respect for clients' individuality. "The homeowners were living with the same furniture they'd had since college, and they were ready for a change," says Kyndra. Today, with a masterfully renovated kitchen and main floor bath, and reimagined rooms, the home has a "super cool, laid-back vibe" that reflects the owners' artistic sensibility and love of color.

1. Teal built-ins flank either side of a blue-tiled fireplace.
2. Vignettes around the home speak to the owners' sensibilities.
3. The dining room's walls and furniture pull colors from its statement vintage rug.
4. A built-in office cubby maximizes space.
5. Styling nooks with treasures old and new enhances the homey feel.
